

FIGURE 4. Mean skinfold thickness in Mexican American adolescents (165 boys, 224 girls) compared to percentiles for Caucasian children from the U.S. Health Examination Survey. The Mexican American Children are significantly ( $p < 0.01$ ) fatter than the reference population at all sites except the medial calf. (Adapted from Mueller et al. (49)).
 (aus: W.H.Mueller: The Biology of Human Fat Patterning S.159 in N.G.Norgan (Ed.): Human Body Composition and Fat Distribution. EURO-NUT-Report-Nr.8, Wageningen, 1985)